Verge earns royal honour

By Kristian Rasmussen
Pioneer Staff

A man known for his booming laugh and over-sized heart earned recognition for the mountain of contributions he has made valley-wide on Saturday, February 23rd.

Floyd Verge, the founder of Verge for Youth, an organization which has raised over $350,000 for youth and families in need, received Queen Elizabeth II's Diamond Jubilee award after being nominated by B.C. Liberal Party candidate Doug Clovechok and Columbia Valley RCMP detachment Staff Sergeant Marko Shehovac for his devotion to the community.

“The work that he has done and his selfless commitment to young people needed to be recognized,” Mr. Clovechok said. “I was absolutely thrilled to be able to put that nomination forward and even more thrilled when he got it.”

Mr. Verge, who was one of the last children born at Pynelogs when it was still a hospital, was raised in the Columbia Valley and first started his volunteer career in 1990, when he found himself offering his time on a Parent Advisory Committee with his wife Shelan, and acting as a Scout leader for his son, Shayne.

Several years later, after re-uniting with his extended family over a series of funerals, Floyd decided that the group should meet under happier circumstances every year. After three years of getting together for golfing tournaments, Floyd’s philanthropic side showed up.

Osborne-Paradis misses World Cup podium by a hair

By Dan Walton
Pioneer Staff

Only one-hundredth of a second separated valley skier Manny Osborne-Paradis from third place at the Audi FIS Alpine Ski World Cup Men’s Downhill in Kvitfjell, Norway last weekend (March 2nd and 3rd).

Immediately following his run through windy conditions on Saturday, 29-year-old Paradis, who races out of Vancouver but owns property and skis on occasion in the Columbia Valley, was in the lead.

That lasted until France’s Adrien Theaux pushed him out of top spot en route to claiming the second World Cup victory of his career.

Paradis was again bumped into third, and then into fourth as skiers completed the 2.6 kilometre course after him. He registered a time of 1:29.61. Mr. Theaux was 0.51 seconds faster, and third place finisher Klaus Kroell of Austria beat Paradis by 0.01 seconds.

Five other Canadians placed behind Mr. Osborne-Paradis in the top 50, including Invermere’s Ben Thomsen, who placed 29th.

In Super G action on Sunday, Mr. Osborne-Paradis started in the 51st position and was unable to finish his run, later tweeting it was “a long day to go out on the fourth gate.”

(Ski racers ideally like to be among the first thirty competitors to hit the course, in order to ski on the snow before other racers begin to erode it excessively.)

His teammate Erik Guay also crashed, while Calgary’s Jan Hudec finished 16th.
RCMP Report

Submitted by Staff Sgt. Marko Shehovac
Columbia Valley RCMP

• On February 28th, Columbia Valley detachment members responded to a single vehicle accident on Highway 93/95 and Burns Avenue near Canal Flats. The 31-year-old Calgarian driver of a 2006 Ford F-150 advised that he swerved sharply to avoid colliding with two elk on the highway. The southbound Ford ended up in the ditch and rolled. Two passengers were injured. The injuries were minor in nature, however they were taken to the hospital by ambulance to get checked out.

• On March 1st, the Columbia Valley detachment was contacted in regards to a complaint of assault that occurred on February 12th on Dehart Rd. The assault involved two adult females. Injuries to the victim were minor. An adult female was charged with assault but police were later contacted and requested to drop any further investigation or charge. Due to the minor nature of the assault the investigation was terminated.

• On March 1st at around 4 p.m., members of the Columbia Valley detachment responded to a complaint of break and enter in progress at the Windermere museum. Police were advised that two youths were seen kicking at the door. Police located two youths in the immediate area who admitted to kicking at the door. The damaged door was secured. Police drove both youths to jail. Cpl Simpson, always the obliging officer, took them up on his offer. The 59-year-old man from Invermere was lodged for the evening. The 31-year-old Calgarian driver of a 2006 Ford F-150 was verbally combative and suggested he be taken to jail. Cpl Simpson, always the obliging officer, took him up on his offer. The 59-year-old man from Invermere was lodged for the evening.

• On March 2nd, Columbia Valley members responded to a complaint of disturbance at Kinsmen beach. It was believed that during this disturbance an 18-year-old male from Invermere in an intoxicated state fell and broke a bottle, cutting himself. Police were called to the hospital later on and located the injured male along with another intoxicated 18-year-old man. After the injuries were attended to both males were arrested and lodged in cells. Contact was made with one of the parents and another adult male and both were released.

• On March 2nd, during patrols after bar hours, an intoxicated man was located in Invermere. The drunken man was verbally combative and suggested he be taken to jail. Cpl Simpson, always the obliging officer, took him up on his offer. The 59-year-old man from Invermere was lodged for the evening.

• On March 3rd, as a result of a complaint of domestic assault in the 1100 block of 13th street, a 35-year-old man from Invermere was arrested and charged with assault. The male will appear in Invermere Provincial Court on June 10th.

Frauds:

Citizens in the Valley have reported numerous fraud attempts to get your money. In one instance, a man was informed he had won a lottery prize and a large sum of money was required for the prize to be released. The victim sent money, but on realizing it was a fraud, contacted Canada Post with a police file number to cancel delivery. One other senior in town received an email with a similar type fraud and again sent a large sum of money. The senior was fortunate that an error was made and a friend was able to intervene to cancel the delivery of the money. The senior continued to receive intimidating emails to forward a password so that the money could be delivered. The friend, using initiative, responded to the email by replying that any further intimidation would result in charges, signed Sergeant Dudley Do Right of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. No further emails were received. The detachment will be contacting Sergeant Dudley Do Right to respond again. Be aware of the numerous fraud attempts to get your money.

Perfecting the Game:

While goal judging a game in Golden, I noticed a group of minor hockey kids killing time play fighting and doing it all wrong from my vantage point. After the first period I went over to the kids and lined them up for pressure points 101 (pain compliance).

I demonstrated some of the pain pressure points on the body. When the game was back on in the second, I could hear screams and notice some of my students practising pressure points on each other.

Great! After the second period, one of the adult executive members informed me that a bunch of kids were hurting each other. I was told to do something about it. Even though off duty, I am always viewed as the police. I advised the executive member that I would certainly deal with these out of control kids. I called them over and told them to put their heads down and act like they were being spoken to as I shook my fingers at them.

They left and I made eye contact with the executive person and gave her a thumbs up. So, down the road if you are watching an NHL game and during Coaches Corner, Grapes comments on how a player takes advantage of the other executive member that I would certainly deal with these out of control kids. I called them over and told them to put their heads down and act like they were being spoken to as I shook my fingers at them.

War on wolves wraps up

By Kristian Rasmussen

A nature photographer, whose keen eye behind the lens and beyond helped him discover 18 wolf snare traps located six kilometres from his Columbia Lake home, has learned that the Ministry of Forests Lands and Natural Resource Operations have curtailed their snare trapping program in the valley as of Thursday, February 28th.

The program will begin again if conflicts between cattle and wolves arise, the Ministry of Environment told The Pioneer in an email.

“I am not just happy about the fact that we have saved a few wolves, which is great, but at the same time we have saved a lot of other wildlife and even dogs in the area,” said Brad Hill.

“The choice of traps are certainly questionable, potentially on legal grounds, but there is also no doubt that these traps cause pain and suffering even if they work perfectly, which they often don’t.”

The snare program was started on February 7th after a total of 31 livestock was reported missing from a local rancher in the Kootenay Trench. Six of the cattle were confirmed by conservation officers to have been killed by wolves.

“Use of risk maps can actually reduce the depredation rate very dramatically,” Mr. Hill said. “That is one of the only mitigation measures on public land.”

The use of snare traps complies with the requirements of the Wildlife Act and utilize the best methods and equipment to avoid incidental catches, the Ministry of Environment wrote to The Pioneer.

The snares themselves are designed with an added tension spring to dispatch the predator as quickly and humanely as possible.

They are also designed to break if a larger animal, such as an ungulate or bear is caught, releasing the animal unharmed, they added via email.

Mr. Hill, who is a biologist with a Master of Science in Behavioural Ecology, is unconvinced that the snares used are humane.

“We have testimony from not only the American Humane Society, but from veterinarians about the speed of death and amount of pain that these inflict,” he said.

The snaring program was curtailed because of little success in catching predators due to mild weather conditions, which melted snow and made trails harder to follow for the wolves and therefore made it harder for them to be snared, the Ministry of Environment conveyed.

“It appears to be a very recent decision to remove the snares,” Mr. Hill said. “I would not be surprised if there was a bit of a move to diffuse the story and diffuse the major issue we are facing in terms of how we are managing wolves, in this case with the snares.”

The Ministry of Forests Lands and Natural Resource Operations would be better to employ a risk mapping program on Crown Land where they could look at the probability of a wolf preying on cattle in an area and keep the predator out, as opposed to using lethal means, Mr. Hill explained.

“Use of risk maps can actually reduce the depredation rate pretty dramatically,” he said. “That is one of the only mitigation measures on public land.”

Mettle tested in trials by fire

By Greg Amos

Chalk up a win for Panorama and the ski racing community in the wake of the 1,000 Peaks Lodge fire at the ski resort on February 27th.

Not only did the fire departments from across the valley respond with lightning speed thanks to quick action taken to report the fire, but racers, coaches and volunteers pulled together to lend out gear to keep a major youth sports event on track, resulting in some very impressive performances by local young athletes who will continue to make us proud well into the future.

Yes, a building was scorched and is most likely a write-off, but no one was hurt. And if anyone was wondering why there’s a volunteer fire department in place at Panorama, that question has hopefully been answered.

As those ashes are cooling, we can expect to see things continue to heat up on the hot springs privatization front. In the hours before that fire broke out, the spark of righteous indignation was igniting a roomful of speakers in Radium, who expressed their concerns over what a privatized Radium Hot Springs pools might look like.

Speaking of things heating up, the letter found on this page aims to pour cold water on what’s been one of the most important global issues for years, one that’s finally being openly discussed in the political arena.

The views I hold on climate change are the polar opposite of those put forth by Mr. Hunsicker — he misses the boat by failing to mention that since 1991, the 24 peer-reviewed papers that reject human-caused global warming are greatly outweighed by the 13,950 articles in which scientists have shown evidence to support the theory — but everyone’s entitled to an opinion.

A warm summer night can now be a good thing and our kids won’t have to worry about killing the planet anymore. The oceans aren’t going to flood and cause everything to go extinct. The carbon tax can go to lowering the deficit, and a Sunday drive will be a good thing. Windmills can be turned off and not kill bats anymore.

Now, David Suzuki’s lectures to our kids can be about biology instead of all the bad things people do. Instead of saving the planet, children can save each other on the monkey bars. Schools can focus less on recycling and more on bicycling. There can be fewer grants to study global warming and more going to fun things.

With no more global warming we can start thinking local and acting local by letting hockey moms keep the car running while waiting for practice to end. All the protesters from Nelson won’t need to carpool anymore because they can each take their own car. Invermere council won’t need to pay Wildsight to study greenhouse gas reduction anymore.

What’s not to like about this great discovery? We can all make more money and not feel bad about it. We can enjoy cheap gas and more room in our cars and also, no more Armageddon.

Climate scientists got it wrong

Dear Editor:

Good news — it’s been discovered there has been no global warming for 16 years. Also, hurricanes and tornados are at a new low. This is good news because now carbon dioxide can go back to being plant food. We Canadians can now be proud of our heavy oil resources. Also, there is no more apocalypse.

What is wrong with Alberta’s drivers?

Dear Editor:

What’s with Alberta driver education (or lack thereof) — is the only criteria to get a driver’s licence in Alberta to have an IQ that matches your shoe size? There sure must be a lot of people with small feet.

As a long haul driver, I’ve driven in just about every province and state in North America and I’ll have you know that I’m not just picking on them for sport. Why is it that the TV show Canada’s Worst Driver has such a high percentage of graduates from the Wildrose province?

Every time I drive any distance, why is it that the vehicles passing on double solid lines, on the crest of a hill, or on a blind corner don’t have a plate on the front and a red and white one on the back?

I didn’t know that the “slower traffic keep right” sign means race the vehicle in the left lane until the lane ends or you have the opportunity to cut off the vehicle in the left lane.

Why is it that every time there is a curve or bend in the road, the rules state that you must slow to 70 kilometres per hour, but when it straightens out, you must do 140 kilometres per hour?

Cruise control must have been invented for everyone except those with Alberta plates; then it’s just an inconvenience that keeps all other traffic moving in an orderly fashion.

The rationale I keep hearing is that the Alberta tourist dollar is good for the B.C. economy, but I seriously wonder if the cost of police responding to accidents, the cost of repeated highway closures due to accidents, or the loss of human life due to poor driver abilities is offset by tourist dollars. How many tourist dollars is a human life worth nowadays? I can’t seem to find that statistic.

Should we assume that the Alberta government intentionally picked red as a prominent colour on the plates so as to be a warning to the unsuspecting?

Why is it that on most weekends and especially on long weekends, a good majority of accidents on B.C. highways even as far away as Vancouver Island involve drivers with those good old red and white plates?

I strongly feel that we should be lobbying the Alberta government to institute a graduated driving education system that should be even more stringent than the one we have in B.C., so as to bring the quality of driver education and expertise to a level that stops endangering the people from other provinces, and yes, even other states.

Thanks for letting me vent, and safe driving to the rest of us.

Smart meters or dialysis?

Dear Editor:

The latest BC Liberal budget would cut healthcare by $235 million, while raising premiums by four per cent. Didn’t they just blow almost a billion dollars on smart meters? Explain that logic. What do these meters do — dialysis? Apparently not; all they do is save you a phone call when the power goes out. So why the priority? My guess is that someone’s making a buck.

Maybe someone like BC Hydro director Tracy McVicar, who is also managing partner of CAI Capital Management, which owned Corix, the company that installed the smart meters.

Other insiders have done well off BC Hydro, such as the independent power producers who signed lucrative contracts to sell spring runoff power to BC Hydro at rates far above market value.

Hydro doesn’t need the power in the spring; their reservoirs are full. If BC Hydro were a private company today, they’d be bankrupt. They aren’t because Hydro has a cash machine: your hydro bill.

So you see, some of the 85,000 British Columbians who refused the smart meter did it for reasons other than just the World Health Organization report which classed wireless phones (and smart meters) as Group 2B “possibly carcinogenic to humans.” Microwaves increase the risk of glioma, a malignant type of brain cancer. The BC Liberals are willing to take chances with your health for their own gain.

Tourist trusted in dialysis during visits to Columbia Valley

Dear Editor:

This letter is written in support of keeping, and perhaps increasing, the existing dialysis services in Invermere. I live in Saskatchewan and have kidney disease. Thus I require dialysis three times a week; some people require four times a week.

I have friends in Invermere and area, whom I very much wished to visit this winter and take in the attractions of this beautiful valley. However, I debated a great deal on whether to come because of the lack of dialysis in Invermere.

The closest treatment centre is in Cranbrook, 138 kilometres away. This takes up basically a full day: three hours of driving and four to five hours at the hospital. That’s inconvenient, to say the least.

Many tourists and visitors come to Invermere; I am one of these. More would almost certainly come if there were dialysis facilities at hand. I understand that several families have already moved out of Invermere because of its lack of this service and thus the need to drive to Cranbrook. This is truly unfortunate. Also, with tourism increasingly becoming a part of Invermere’s economy, the availability of dialysis would ensure these people visiting and living in the valley can stay in the valley. The fact that Invermere already has the basic equipment and space for dialysis is a strong plus for reopening.

I would very much like to return to this area, especially in winter. However, I have reservations because of the inconvenience of travelling a long distance for dialysis. There is an obvious need for this service, both now and in the foreseeable future. I would like to add my voice to those advocating the reopening of the Invermere facility.

Movie Review: Red Dawn

Reviewed by Kristian Rasmussen

Director Dan Bradley’s Red Dawn reminds me of the activity of spring yard work. Like the multitude of different coloured leaves that fly in every direction while being raked into a pile, the director has produced some bright explosions of activity as his protagonist and crew battle an invading army. However, in the end Mr. Bradley is only churning over a decomposing plot and story that should have been bagged long ago.

The film, which is based on the 1984 cult classic of the same name, begins with a high school football game in Spokane, Washington, where the audience is introduced to hometown quarterback Matt Eckert (Josh Peck), his masculine yet quasi-mute father (Brett Cullen) and his brother, Iraq war vet Jed Eckert (Chris Hemsworth).

After a mysterious power outage following the game, the brothers find themselves awakening to a panoramic view of North Korean transport planes and paratroopers filling the sky the next day. Jed and a motley crew of teenagers narrowly escape to a rural cabin. The battle-hardened Jed instructs his new team of misfits on the finer points of guerilla tactics and turns them into a freedom force named after the high school mascot, The Wolverines.

If the film wasn’t slightly racist, it could be viewed as a great B-movie. The North Koreans remain completely voiceless and act as blind automatons to their leader Captain Cho (Will Yun Lee). (This could be due to the fact the bad guys were re-cast from Chinese troops to North Korean troops, after Chinese film distributors lodged complaints.)

The action scenes centre around guerilla strikes led by Jed and his crew against North Korean soldiers and collaborators. The North Koreans react to the attacks with massive bombing attacks on the rural locale concealing the group. The tension in the film could have been heightened in a myriad of different ways. One only has to assume that a foreign occupation would likely elicit a little more fear and emotional discourse between the leading characters; however, the dialogue remains as lifeless as the bodies that stack up through the film.

An unstable world economy, a recent North Korean threat to remove the ceasefire agreement and political relationships worn thin are all modern facts that should have made this film feel at least slightly plausible, but it arrives as a silly right-wing ode to Reagan-era politics.

No cause found in Pano blaze

By Kristian Rasmussen, Pioneer Staff

After day and a half of digging through the charred remains of Panorama Mountain Village’s 1,000 Peaks Lodge, Columbia Valley Fire and Rescue and the B.C. Safety Authority were unable to produce any leads as to the cause of the Wednesday, February 27th blaze.

“Due to the extreme heat in the area of origin, vital evidence was completely destroyed, giving investigators no option other than to deem the cause undetermined,” fire chief Jim Miller stated in a Regional District of East Kootenay press release. “We have identified where the fire started and although the cause is undetermined, we can confirm that foul-play and human related activities were not factors in the fire.”

The fire, which ripped through the top two floors of the lodge early Wednesday morning, displaced dozens of residents staying at the lodge, including seven members of Edmonton’s Rabbit Hill Ski Team who were preparing for the U16 CanAm Western Championship. Although visitors were left temporarily homeless by the blaze, the inferno could have had much more drastic consequences if it were not for the efforts of bystanders.

In a statement given to authorities, Phil Marshall, who owns the Earl Grey Lodge and restaurant with his wife Clare, said he noticed flames erupting from the penthouse condo of the 1,000 Peaks Lodge while walking along Summit Drive and chatting with a friend, Jason Smith at around 1 a.m. Mr. Smith, who was carrying a fire department radio at the time, immediately called in the blaze. The restauranteur grabbed a fire extinguisher from his business and gained access to the 1,000 Peaks Lodge through the north stairwell and was joined by another good samaritan, Cam Cole. The duo loudly banged on each door they could find to warn resident of the quickly escalating inferno.

“If I had been called earlier on the phone, I returned to the penthouse and knocked the door in, being aware that there may have been a flash back,” Mr. Marshall stated in official testimonial.

The sprinklers on the top floor were working, but the area was filled with smoke.

“I grabbed a towel from the kitchen and wet it to put over my face before proceeding through the lounge to the deck because the glass door to the deck had broken and I was able to use the fire extinguisher to put out the fire out on one side of the deck before it ran dry,”

He returned to the kitchen and filled a garbage can with water to fight the blaze. Realizing that the fire was out of control, Mr. Marshall performed a hand search of the bedrooms and found them empty. He quickly fled the building, but not without suffering from prolonged smoke inhalation, which resulted in an evening of sickness and difficulty breathing.

Although his actions were crucial in warning visitors of the blaze, Mr. Marshall said he’d rather not be singled out for his role, and added that “a lot of people did a great job that night.”
Book bears witness

By Dan Walton
Pioneer Staff

A Fairmont woman has used her literary craft to tell the tale of a sprightly sow and her cuddly cubs.

Joan Olsen will be inviting readers for a creative look inside the world of bears at Smoking Waters Coffee Co. at 3 p.m. on Saturday, March 16th with a public reading of her children’s book, The Fairmont Bears.

“It was inspired after my granddaughter saw one off the side of my deck, so I thought I would write a story about the bears,” Ms. Olsen explained to The Pioneer.

The Fairmont Bears is inspired, not only by the observations of her granddaughter, but also by local geography. The Fairmont region acts as a backdrop for the adventures of a mother bear, Millie and her two cubs, Willy and Miles.

Although Ms. Olsen is a fan of the valley’s largest omnivores, she found she received a little too much inspiration for her children’s book last year, when local bears often overstayed their welcome in the community.

“It got to be a bit much with them last year,” she added. “But, both my husband and myself love bears.”

In addition to the Fairmont chapter of the bear family saga, Ms. Olsen has upcoming plans to release a second children’s book focusing on The Fairmont Bears adventures in Radium. The author may also share some of her most recent work at the March 16th reading.

“I’ll talk about it and perhaps read a rough draft,” Ms. Olsen hinted. “The book was written locally and we hope the community supports it.”

Light refreshments will be offered during the reading and the public are encouraged to attend.

Verge for Youth the young girl received to her family. Through the generosity of Verge for Youth the young girl received the equipment and was reunited with her family at home.

“The more we can help the youth out, the more they are going to help their communities wherever they are later on,” he explained. “I think that is the best investment.”

Staff Sergeant Shehovac, who was a co-nominator of Floyd and also received the Diamond Jubilee Award, is surprised by Floyd’s drive to constantly better his community.

“To me, I received the award because it is what I do,” he said. “I am glad that someone put my name forward, but that is what I expect of myself. With a volunteer, it is even more special to me because it is not their job and they are not getting paid for anything.”

Floyd’s popularity in the valley was nowhere more obvious than when he received his award.

“There was a lady that came up to him in tears and hugged him,” Staff Sergeant Shehovac added. “I think that is probably the best thing about what he does is when people get back to Floyd about the difference that he made to them.”

Although Floyd is an award-winning example of a volunteer, anyone can get involved to support their community.

“Everybody’s time, no matter how small, is important,” Floyd added. “Even if you can only give five minutes or half an hour or whatever, if you are giving of yourself you are a volunteer.”

“I just happened to say, ‘listen we are here every year, why don’t we see if we can raise some money?’”

During the first summer of the Verge for Youth Golf Tourney in 1996 the group raised $800 for the community and were motivated to continually fundraise for youth and their families struggling through difficult times and illness.

“That was the start of it and then just spread your wings from there,” he added. “Unfortunately, the way our system is, when you are in the hospital everything is covered, but when you are out of the hospital nothing is covered and because of that, we got involved.”

Although he has helped dozens of community members, one story sticks out for Floyd. A four-year-old child, who had recently received a heart transplant, was in need of a $7,000 monitoring machine in order to be able to come home to her family. Through the generosity of Verge for Youth the young girl received the equipment and was reunited with her family at home.

U.S. economic update

First came the debt ceiling, then the fiscal cliff. Now the latest U.S. economic event is “the sequester,” which refers to the spending reductions that came into effect on March 1, 2013. Here is a brief synopsis of the debt ceiling, the fiscal cliff and the sequester, and how they relate to U.S. economics today.

Origins

The origins of the sequester date back to the U.S. debt-ceiling crisis of 2011, which had threatened to lead the country into sovereign default on about August 3rd, 2011.

Fortunately, crisis was averted by the signing of the Budget Control Act of 2011 by President Barack Obama. The enactment of the Budget Control Act imposed several things, including specific increases to the debt ceiling and deficit reduction measures.

It also called for the appointment of 12 bi-partisan congressmen, known as the Super Committee, to figure out a way to trim at least $1.5 trillion from the deficit over 10 years, in a way that would be acceptable to both Democratic and Republican members of Congress.

If they failed to find an acceptable middle ground, a series of tax increases and cuts to government spending would kick in on January 1st, 2013. This event became known as the “fiscal cliff.”

In December 2012, the Super Committee reported that it was unable to reach a decision. Fortunately, the U.S. Senate passed a compromise bill at the last minute, and the fiscal cliff was averted. But the U.S. wasn’t in the clear yet. The compromise bill only addressed the issue of tax increases, thus deferring the discussion of spending cuts. Therefore, Congress extended the deadline for decision on spending cuts for two months. This leads us to the sequester on March 1st, 2013.

The Sequester

Simply put, the sequester is a bunch of federal spending cuts that were scheduled to start automatically on March 1st, 2013 unless another deal could be reached by then. The cuts amount to $85 billion for 2013, and total about $1.2 trillion between 2013 and 2021.

The spending cuts will be felt across most sectors of the economy. In 2013, about 50 per cent of the cuts will come from defense spending, and the other half from a myriad of other programs, such as Medicare, NASA, the FBI and airport security.

There’s no question that $85 billion is a lot of money, but to put things into perspective, consider how much of an impact that $85 billion of less spending would have on the U.S economy. The Congressional Budget Office estimates that the sequester will lower the U.S. gross domestic product (GDP) by about 0.6 per cent, which, in an economy with a $15.7 trillion GDP, really isn’t much of an impact.

Debt ceiling in 2013

One more thing the compromise bill did not address was another increase to the debt ceiling. On February 4th, 2013 the President signed a legislation suspending the debt ceiling level until May 18th, 2013. As a result, the current debt limit of $16.4 trillion does not apply until then.

While nobody is sure how the latest debt ceiling discussion will play out, there is certain to be plenty of debate over the next few months regarding how much spending needs to be cut and whether or not taxes will be raised.

Final thoughts

The way that federal governments handle important decisions can sometimes seem confusing; however, it’s important to remember that they are tasked with very significant decisions that will impact not only their own country, but the world to some extent.

To put things in perspective, the debt ceiling, fiscal cliff and the sequester are rooted in basic financial principles. Just like in personal finance, if a government needs to balance their budget and reduce their debt load, they must do so by earning more money (in their case, raising taxes) or spending less money.

All in all, it would appear the U.S. government is heading in the right direction.

Vaulting victory

The Glacier Peaks Gymnastics Centre has somersaulted their way into success after opening in the Columbia Valley on September 24th last year.

Membership to the facility has grown by over 1000 per cent to just under 300 members since opening. T.C. Rogers, co-owner of the facility, is now working on plans to put together a multi-sport facility attached to the gymnastics complex.

“Right now we are working with a variety of people to put together an organization called the Glacier Peak Society, which is going to be helping the drive towards the multi-sport complex,” she said. “We have already had a meeting with 22 representatives from different organizations and sports groups that want to become a part of the facility.”

Interested parties looking to contribute to the completion of a multi-sport facility can get in touch with TC via email at info@glacierpeaksgymnastics.com.

Resort jumps into marketing pool

Copper Point Resort has received approval for membership in the Invermere-Panorama Destination Marketing Organization (DMO), but is still waiting for the green light from the Regional District of East Kootenay, explained Amanda Robinson, general manager of Copper Point Resort. Once approved, the resort can begin charging a two per cent room tax that’s put towards a fund to market the Invermere and Panorama area.

“We will be able to provide marketing dollars to enhance what the Invermere-Panorama DMO can do,” she said. “I am certainly happy to provide my opinion and thoughts on anything and everything.”

Terrain park progression

Skiers and snowboarders looking for buttery-smooth rails will discover some exciting new challenges at the Fairmont’s Rockstar Terrain Park. The park has been outfitted with six new obstacles, including rails, boxes, tubes, and kicker jumps.

“The highlight of the expanded area is the ability to progress your skills from starting on the smaller tricks to working your way up to the higher difficulty level,” said Colleen McKee, marketing manager at Fairmont Hot Springs Resort.

“The Fairmont Hot Springs Ski Area is a great hub for families and kids learning how to ski, so the expansion of a beginner to intermediate style terrain park is a perfect fit.”

Community composting coming to Invermere?

By Dan Walton
Pioneer Staff

A District of Invermere committee meeting on Wednesday, March 6th included discussion about potential composting solutions to implement locally.

“We would like to see organic waste dealt with in a way that produces a product that can benefit waste reduction and create more organics for use in food gardens and food production in our community,” said Groundswell Network Society project leader Bill Swan.

After Groundswell presented the District of Invermere with outcomes from a composting analysis at the February 26th council meeting, the district may be ready to implement organic recycling after agreeing to discuss the Community Composting Feasibility Analysis.

While a decision has yet to be made to proceed with the local compost management, a number of options are on the table. Regular compost pickup alongside garbage collection, a communal deposit, and a green bin program are among the possible solutions to be discussed.

But the solution, “comes down to willingness to do it and the financials,” Mr. Swan said. “If it makes financial sense, it could come happen sooner than later.”

Mr. Swan says that a considerable amount of money is spent by every community in dealing with organic waste, particularly in the form of the sewage treatment.

“So it’s not that the money isn’t being spent; it’s a process to look at whether we can continue to spend the same amount or a little more, or even a little less, and change the way the system deals with that waste.”

Though finances are posing a probable hurdle in front of Groundswell’s proposal, public support is on their side.

Invermere’s long-term community sustainability plan which was adopted in 2011, Imagine Invermere 2030, indicated a willingness throughout the community to participate in public composting.

Before committing to anything long term, Mr. Swan anticipates “some sort of scalable pilot that addresses peoples’ interest but is safer financially for everyone to get started with.”

Tell Tammy

Dear Tammy,

I have a difficult time saying no when friends ask me to do things. I never want to miss out on anything, but it is costly and starting to hurt my bank account. I am also afraid to make them upset by saying no. What do you suggest I do? ~ Fern

Hi Fern,

Believe it or not the issue you mentioned is a common one for many people. The best thing for you to start with is to know what your entertainment budget is. How much can you afford every week or month?

When people start to invite you to various things, sit back and think about how much you want to participate in that event before you say yes. Prioritize your available options; wouldn't it be better to go to that once-in-a-lifetime concert, than to go out for dinner three times with friends you see all the time anyway?

Secondly, talk to your friends. I can almost guarantee you that you aren't the only one who is struggling to do it all. Maybe once you say something out in the open it will take the pressure they are feeling off as well.

Third, you don't have to say no to everything; instead, offer an alternative, cheaper solution. Invite people over for dinner, instead of going out, or only go to a movie on cheap Tuesday. At the end of the day, you don't want to feel stressed over money issues, and overspending. ~ Tammy

Hello Tammy,

My father and I have had a negative relationship for the longest time. I feel that he has blamed me for many things that went wrong in my parents' relationship. I would like to have a relationship with him, for myself and for my children. Where do I start? ~ Regan

Hello Regan,

I can understand how you would be upset about this situation and want to move forward, especially when there are children involved; you want them to have their grandfather in their lives. It is not always easy to work through this sort of stuff with family or friends. Additionally, when we are dealing with family it can be that much more difficult.

The first thing I suggest you do is to get in contact with your father either in person, over the phone, or even email if you have to. Have a heartfelt discussion about how you feel, where you would like things to go, and that you would like a relationship together. Use “I” statements so that he doesn't get defensive, and talk to him in a neutral positive manner. If you don't feel you can remain calm in person, then maybe it is best not to see him, but to email him and see where it goes.

The important things is to be open and honest, that it will go a long way! I hope this helps you! ~ Tammy

Amazing auditions begin

By Kristian Rasmussen, Pioneer Staff

Teams of valley racers are hoping to put the strength of their relationships through the ultimate test during the first installment of the Amazing Race Canada, still in its audition phase and set to air this summer. Local teams include Invermere’s Lindsay Johnston and her sister Paige of Calgary, and Invermere’s Cori Gadomski and her best friend Carly Ferchuck of Cochrane, Alberta.

“For us, it is a neat opportunity to build our relationship that has become closer in recent years,” Lindsay said. “We definitely want to win for dad because this is something he would definitely have excelled at.”

Although they hope to embark on the ultimate Canadian adventure together, the sister team has not always been close, due to a seven-year age gap between them. “The show that has become closer in recent years,” Lindsay said. “We definitely want to win for dad because this is something he would definitely have excelled at.”

Although not a religious follower of the show over its 12-year history, Lindsay built an informal routine of tuning in to watch the Amazing Race every Sunday. The interesting challenges and exotic global environments immediately sparked an interest in her and motivated the Invermere resident to film a YouTube audition video with her sister, which has already garnered over 2,300 views.

“She has become a really amazing person and it is exciting to see her coming into her own,” Lindsay said. “I think this is going to be a great experience and I think we are going to complement each other in a lot of ways.”

Paige adds an element of charm and public relations skill, while Lindsay brings raw practicality and life experience, she said.

Cori Gadomski and Carly Ferchuk are best friends who signed up for the show because of their love for adventure and the charisma they share with each other, Cori said.

“She is definitely the mother and peacekeeper,” Cori added. “I am certainly the competitive one, but we actually balance each other out pretty good.”

Carli and Cori’s YouTube audition video has garnered over 1,000 views. Also trying out for the race are Fairmont’s Darren Tapp and Kristen Idiens.

“The Amazing Race Canada spans 9,000 kilometres across Canada and should touch all 10 provinces and three territories. The show is designed to offer exciting challenges to competitors, which reflect each region of the country.

OBITUARY

EMILIA (MILLIE) CROOK
March 7, 1928 – February 23, 2013

Beloved wife of the late John S. Crook & dear mother to Shane (Ingrid), Roger (Joanne), Sherree (Allan), Terry (Miriam), Greg (Pat) and Edward (Marie). She is also survived by her ten grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Millie passed away peacefully at Wetaskiwin Hospital at the age of 84. Millie will be greatly missed by her children, grandchildren and everyone who knew her.

The viewing and service was held in Wetaskiwin Alberta on February 27. In lieu of flowers donations may be made to the Heart & Stroke Foundation.

HERBERT NUESSLEIN
March 3, 1928-February 26, 2013

It is with great sadness we mourn the death of Herbert Nuesslein, a beloved husband, father and grandfather. He will also be deeply missed by the Invermere Congregation of Jehovah’s Witnesses and many close friends.

Herbert is survived by his wife Hilde, son David Nuesslein (Deanna), daughter Eunice Kortegaard (Gorm) and grand-daughter Elise.

Herbert and Hilde arrived in Invermere in 1971 with their children Eunice and David. Since that time Herbert and Hilde have been an integral part of the Invermere Congregation, and have distinguished themselves by their generosity, hospitality and zeal. Herbert expended himself for the congregation and there were few people not touched by his integrity, kindness, and large-heartedness. He was especially noted for his fervour for the ministry and many in the valley received regular visits from him.

There was a special place in his heart for anyone struggling and disadvantaged, and he was quick to help out wherever he saw a need, quietly, without fanfare.

His love for Jehovah and his family was always evident. Herbert was well known in Columbia House North Wing for his twice daily visits to Hilde, often bringing her flowers and fruit. He wanted to “see her through another season”. It was not to be. He died peacefully on Tuesday, February 26, 2013, surrounded by special friends who would not let him die alone. We eagerly await his resurrection as promised (John 5:28-29) and we are comforted that he is sleeping peacefully in Jehovah’s memory.

There was a Memorial Service held for Herbert on Saturday March 2, 2013 at the Invermere Kingdom Hall of Jehovah’s Witnesses. He will be missed by many.

OBITUARY

Dr. Donald Lloyd Thompson DDS
December 13, 1921 -February 23, 2013

Donald Thompson enjoyed a very long and charmed life. He was born in Moose Jaw Saskatchewan, the son of Jack and Jean Thompson, and brother to Helen Hardy of Saskatoon.

While still in high school, Don fell in love with the beautiful Mary Johnston of Moose Jaw. In 1945, as soon as Don returned from overseas, he and Mary were married. Don and Mary had four children: John (Lesley Ostrosser), Donna Price (Askey) (Bob), Pam Thompson (Ted Fullerton) and Pat Peters (Mat). Also 3 grandsons -Paul Askey (Cori), Colin Askey and Spencer Brown, as well as 2 great grandchildren--Ethan and Marco Askey.

After Don retired, he and Mary moved to their Windermere cabin, which they have enjoyed since 1958. They spent their summers in Windermere with family and their many gifting friends at Fairmont, then escaping the Canadian winters enjoying the company of friends and family in Palm Desert California.

Don enjoyed a life with good health, many good friends and much laughter.

His friends and family will remember him as a man with a million stories, a quick inquiring mind and a great sense of humour, which he maintained to the end. We will miss you Dad, and we will continue to celebrate your life well lived.

Friends are invited to join the family in a celebration of Don’s life 2 p.m. Saturday, March 9th, at McNinsic and Holloway, 14411 Bannister Rd S.E., Calgary (403-256-9575).

Condolences may be forwarded through www.mcninsicandholloway.com.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Alberta Adolescent Recovery Center (AARC).

CHEERS & JEERS

Cheers to Sharon Wass, the Program coordinator of the Targeted Initiative for Older Workers program. Thank you for your endless efforts, undying inspirations and constant support in assisting our generation of lost souls to find renewed spirits, rejuvenated attitudes and a resounding thirst for discovery. If there is any truth to karma, the world will be yours. The Local 12.

Cheers to Jim Jenkinson at the Employment Centre for his expertise and assistance.

Cheers to Jared K. Shaw Contracting for a successful first year in business. Thank you for all that have done for us.

Jeers to the people who use Facebook irresponsibly! Have some respect and think of people’s sacred cows?

Jeers to Cindy and Choppers. Cindy you go over and above for our furry friends. Your time, love and generosity are greatly appreciated. I think I can speak for all us animal lovers in Invermere and say, thank you!

Jeers to the manager who continues to bad-mouth her employees. Slamming others to make yourself look better only shows your insecurities.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Calling all Edgewater Residents!

The Edgewater Recreation Society will be holding the Annual General Meeting:
March 19, 2013, 7:00 p.m., Edgewater Community Hall.

We strongly encourage you to attend and see what’s been done and what’s to come!

For meeting agenda please go to www.facebook.com/ERSevents or call Tammy 250-270-0340. See you there!
CHEERS & JEERS

CHEERS & JEERS

Jeers to Steve and Cathy for snow clearing at Windermere Place. It’s much appreciated.

Jeers to Keep Jumbo Wild for defining who I am based on which provincial party I vote for.

Big jeers to the idiots who think running bus stops with the red flashing lights is fun. Imagine how you would feel if actually hit my son or anyone. How would you feel if it was your child or family? Pay attention and stop!

Cheers to the DTSS Junior Boys Basketball Team for winning the East Kootenay Championship! Also big cheers to coaches Justin and Jordan for all their time and dedication. It is greatly appreciated!

CHEERS & JEERS

Jeers to cell phone service in the park. There are sure to be more accidents now!

Cheers to Elements Restaurant at the Copper Point Resort for offering a varied menu and competitive prices. Another quality eating establishment in the region is welcome and appreciated. We had a fantastic meal the other night and the service was great!

Cheers to the Re-use Shed at the Columbia Valley Trading for caring what happens to other small businesses! We are grateful you are on council! And to Mayor Gerry Taft for taking small business concerns back to council for review! Your willingness to look at the big picture is most appreciated! Y, M and A at River Gems.

CHEERS & JEERS

Jeers to Chris MacDonald at Columbia Valley Trading for caring about the people involved in the fire at Columbia Ridge, please reply. I apologize. He usually eats the dogs’ food at home. Bad Lucky.

CHEERS & JEERS

Jeers to the people who can’t read signs that say “No Dogs Allowed” on the Windermere School field. I walked around; why can’t you?

A huge cheers to Sienna and Shuswap Band for organizing another great 6 weeks of skiing! All your hard work each Saturday does not go unnoticed. See you all next year! Another cheers to the great staff and instructors at Panorama. You guys do an amazing job!

Cheers to Theresa for all the organizing and to people of All Saints in Edgewater. Inspiring World Day of Prayer and delicious food at home. Bad Lucky.

CHEERS & JEERS

Cheers to the Valley Fitness Centre for allowing the infants and toddlers from Sonshine to learn and play in your gym. They absolutely adored it. Cheers to the people working out at the gym while our kids watched you. Much appreciated! It’s amazing how wonderful this valley is.

Jeers to those who use the term March Madness in any other way other than for US college basketball. I expect to see a Blue Devil or Gator in those ads. Cheers to Gonzaga! Let’s cheer on our 4 starting Canadians representing America’s #1 team!

CHEERS & JEERS

Jeers to Thandrea of The Stem for your delightful, happy classy bouquets at offices and homes all over town.

Cheers to Greg Deck, Steven Ostrander and Nancy Hugunin. We are proud of you. Hang in there and be strong.

Cheers to the Anti-Jumbo coalition. By now the province could collect $100,000 between Radium and Windermere. Where there’s a will, there’s a way!

Jeers to all of those who can’t see far enough into the future to realize that at some point someone in your family will need to work in the valley. Let’s find a way to accommodate new businesses and the environment. Where there’s a will, there’s a way!

Jeers to my charcoal cat if he is the one sneaking in your cat door, eating your cat food and spraying on his way out. If it is my cat, from Columbia Ridge, please reply. I apologize. He usually eats the dog’s food at home. Bad Lucky.

Jeers to Justin Atterbury for advocating on behalf of small businesses! We are grateful you are on council! And to Mayor Gerry Taft for taking small business concerns back to council for review! Your willingness to look at the big picture is most appreciated! Y, M and A at River Gems.

CHEERS & JEERS

Cheers to Tammy for helping me carry a table up two flights of stairs. Cheers to the Pioneer for posting Cheers! What a great way to honour kindness and great people! Yolande.

Young Canuck skiers make their mark

By Dan Walton
Pioneer Staff

It took more than a raging condo fire on Wednesday, February 27th to put a damper on the Cresa Can Am under-16 Western alpine ski race weekend at Panorama Mountain Resort, where more than a dozen racers from the Columbia Valley made their mark on the field of nearly 200 skiers from Canada and the United States.

“Arguably we saw some World Cup turns this weekend,” said Nigel Cooper, manager of athlete development with Alpine Canada. “Not every turn and not from every kid, but I think the front of the pack is very strong.”

With some racers fetching their sprinkler-soaked boots from dryers in the Panorama rental shop just prior to a practice session on Thursday, February 28th, the weekend race series took advantage of some fresh snow on the mountain and enthusiasm imported from all corners of B.C.

Amelia Smart from the Panorama Ski Club began the competition by winning the women’s giant slalom event with two strong runs that totalled 2:08.18. Following close behind in second with a 2:11.16 run was the Sunshine Ski Club’s Haley McKercher, who was trailed by third-place finisher Courtney Hoffos of the Windermere Valley Ski Club, who registered 2:11.16.

Whistler’s Riley Seger was the top finisher in the men’s giant slalom event, with two runs totalling 1:58.18, and earned the title men’s overall champion at the event. Runner-up Keegan Sharp of the Panorama Ski Club was just behind him in the giant slalom with a time of 1:58.67.

Tyra Collombin of Fernie won the women’s slalom event on Friday, March 1st after clocking 1:22.13 following her two runs. Finishing second was Sarah Taylor of Lake Louise with 1:22.78. Fifth place finisher Courtney Hoffos registered the most impressive time locally with 1:23.21, barely faster than seventh place Robyn Fiell of Panorama at 1:23.93.

Max Scharf of Revelstoke earned first place in the men’s slalom event after completing two runs in 1:24.29. The runner up was Whistler’s Alex Gershon who registered a time of 1:24.93, followed by Big White’s Alex Roehrig at 1:25.41. David Catherwood with Panorama placed seventh with a time of 1:25.98.

Georgia Willinger with the Kananaskis Alpine Ski Club earned victory in the women’s super G on Saturday, March 2nd after posting a time of 53.29. In second was Haley McKercher of Sunshine with 53.96, followed by Georgia Burgess of Banff at 54.05. Windermere’s Courtney Hoffos came in fifth with a time of 54.30, right before sixth-place finisher Amelia Smart of Panorama at 54.42.

Riley Seger from Whistler was crowned the men’s super G winner after registering 52.35 as his final time. Keegan Sharp from Panorama was the runner-up after posting a time of 52.44. James Crawford from Whistler took third place with a time of 52.52.

Keegan Sharp placed second in the men’s skier cross event on Sunday, March 3 with a run clocking at 1:08.09, while Amelia Smart finished second on the women’s side with a time of 1:11.31. Each of the local skiers was a member of the top-placing men’s and women’s skier cross teams.

Panorama to host world paralympic ski race in 2015

Panorama Mountain Village will be the worldwide hub of international paralympic competition for one week spanning February and March in 2015, after the International Paralympic Committee named the local ski resort as the destination for the Alpine Skiing World Championships on Wednesday, February 27th.

“I am proud to announce Invermere as the host city for the 2015 IPC Alpine Skiing World Championships following the great Paralympic Winter Games that Canada put on nearly three years ago and last year’s World Cup final,” said International Paralympic Committee chief executive Xavier Gonzalez.

“I am delighted to see winter parasport flourishing in Canada, and this will bring it to another level outside of the Paralympic Games,” he added.

The 2015 Championships will be the seventh edition of the competition, and follows a successful 2011-2012 World Cup final event at Panorama. Invermere is expected to welcome 120 athletes to the championships, which is due to run from February 24th until March 4th in two years from now.

Starlight fades on Fairmont challenge

By Greg Amos
Pioneer Staff

Another year of competing for similarity has come to an end at the Fairmont Hot Springs Resort ski hill, where the most consistent skiers were rewarded after the race series concluded on Friday, February 22nd.

The challenge involves skiers and boarders stringing together runs as close to the same times as possible, often while enjoying the company of their teammates through light-hearted antics or team themes. The race series took place on Friday nights throughout February.

Erin McNeill proved she was the most consistent lady, putting together a pair of runs that differed by a mere 0.510 seconds after competing in three of the four challenge nights. Lone Harding came in second place with a 0.932 second differential, while Madison Haynes managed a 1.207 second differential.

On the men’s side, Jordan Downey managed a mere 0.549 second gap between two of his runs, Bryan Armstrong came up with a 0.774 second difference, and Matthew Hammond managed a 0.916 second gap between his times.
Bat species in the Columbia Trench were commonly believed to have hibernated or migrated during winter months, but biologists are finding out that species among the local population remain quite active during low temperatures. The findings come around the same time as the discovery of White Nose Syndrome, an illness first discovered in the U.S. which causes hyperactivity among bats during the winter months.

Biologists are on the lookout for unexpected activity among bat species residing in the Columbia Valley, as the possible arrival of White Nose Syndrome could pose a serious threat.

The illness is causing alarming fatality rates in parts of the continent.

“In some bat populations in the United States, it’s wiped out 95 per cent of some species in some caves, so it really is a lethal disease,” said Angus Glass, the communications coordinator for the Columbia Region Fish and Wildlife Compensation Program.

A free presentation on bat ecology will be offered in Invermere on Thursday, March 7th by Dr. Cori Lausen, one of B.C.’s leading bat biologists. Discussing the “unprecedented conservation threats” facing bat populations in North America, the 90-minute session takes place in the David Thompson Secondary School theatre at 7 p.m.

“Many people thought that they basically hibernate for five months of the year; Cori’s finding out that bats typically are more active than usually, but with White Nose Syndrome, it could make them more active.”

As biologists only recently discovered that Canadian bats are relatively active during the winter, the symptoms of White Nose Syndrome are seeming to play a fatal role during the cold months.

“The more we know about these things, the better solutions we can come up with to slow the spread,” said Glass. “It’s just like invasive weeds, the more knowledge that we have the better we can cope with them.”

Glass says the disease is most often spread by humans traveling from one mine or cave to another and transmitting contaminated soil, “especially in winter periods when the bats are in there,” he said.

Those interested in learning about bat ecology, and anyone fascinated with nature and wildlife, is invited to the free presentation, titled Bats active in winter - and in crisis? No registration is required.

More information about the seminar can be found by contacting the Columbia Region office for BC Hydro at 250-365-4551.

Charity bake sale a go for St. Patrick’s day

Submit by the Valley Go-Go Sisters

We are sponsoring the annual St. Patrick’s Day Tea and Bake Sale at Christ Church Trinity, to be held on Saturday, March 16th, from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., in order to raise money to deal with the effects of HIV and AIDS in Africa.

The Valley Go-Go Sisters are part of the Stephen Lewis Foundation’s Grandmothers to Grandmothers campaign, established to support families in sub-Saharan Africa who have been impacted by HIV and AIDS. Since 2006, more than 250 groups of Canadian grandmothers have raised an incredible $16.5 million to support African grandmothers who have stepped forward to care for millions of children orphaned by AIDS.

From this fund-raising campaign, 90 per cent of the money raised reaches these families. These resources provide grandmothers and children supports that include food, educational supplies, uniforms and school fees, medical care, counselling, and adequate housing.

Grandmothers in Africa display amazing resilience and courage, even while grieving for their own children.

Our Valley Go-Go Sisters are proud to be part of this movement in Canada and look forward to having your attendance at our tea. Admission is by donation, and all proceeds from the event will be given to the Stephen Lewis Foundation. Since 2003, the foundation has funded over 700 initiatives, partnering with 300 community-based organizations in the 15 African countries hardest hit by the pandemic.

'Hot springs' continued from page 3

He didn’t want it back just for our band, but so the public could use it for healing.

Eugene’s father, Ox, was equally dismayed at the failure of the contract between the Shuswap people and the federal government.

“If you want to privatize, give us our land,” he added. “It was taken from us in 1914, but it won’t be taken in 2013.”

In addition to concerns surrounding the Shuswap Nation’s claim to the land, hot spring employees were also dismayed about the move to privatize.

Colorado Valley Swim Club head coach Karen Fahrni, who oversees the Otters swim team and is a lifeguard at the Radium Hot Springs pools, expressed her concern about the possibility of the springs turning into a private spa.

“What spa wants five and six-year-olds running around?” she said. “We will be phased out, with no swimming pool for the valley.”

The move to a spa environment could limit access to the facility for families and children, she said, as well as remove the ability for the swim club to train at the facility.

Adding a spa is one of the suggestions that has been put forward by Tracy Thiessen, Parks Canada’s executive director of the mountain national parks.

A group of emerging philanthropists are about to dig deep to find their roots on an 11-day humanitarian adventure to Ghana, where they will participate in the construction of a school, join rural village activities and learn about a different culture.

The youth were originally scheduled to travel to Kenya, but an upcoming election and predicted political instability led the students guides, Education First Educational Tours and Me to We, to change their travel plans.

“I am really excited and really interested in experiencing culture and diversity, but I also don’t really know what is going to happen when I am there,” said Rochelle Mathieu, a participating student.

The group is made up of 10 local high school students in Grades 11 and 12 and eight students from Sparwood, who have raised $43,000 for their charity mission, and will be departing for the west African Nation on Saturday, March 9th.

Although details of their trip remain loose, the group arrive in Accra, the capital of Ghana, at around 8 p.m. where they will embark on a four-hour bus ride to a remote village.

The next day entails a building workshop followed by multiple days of contributing to the construction of a school and participating in traditional activities around the village, including a 1.6-kilometre daily trek to find water, Ms. Mathieu added.

“I am most excited about spending time with the community and understanding their way of life as opposed to ours in Canada,” she said. “I am kind of nervous though. Talking to other people in the group and discussing what we are nervous about helps, and packing and repacking makes me feel better.”

Along with preparations come large quantities of vaccinations and pills required for the adventure. The secondary student was required to get a flu, tetanus, yellow fever, hepatitis A and B and typhoid shot as well as a regime of malaria pills before being allowed to embark on the trip to the African nation.

After she returns from the adventure, the globetrotter plans to attend the British Columbia Institute of Technology’s X-Ray technician program and then earn her Teaching English as a Second Language certificate to teach overseas.
“Most things break, including hearts. The lessons of life amount not to wisdom, but to scar tissue and callus.”

- Wallace Stegner

I’ve got scars, lots of them; they’re reminders of past pain and that wounds do heal. Every scar has a story to tell. The hardest ones to talk about are the scars on my heart. Over the years I’ve loved sincerely and been left heartbroken. Plenty of times I’ve been offended by something someone has done or said, and wanted nothing more to do with them. C.S. Lewis wrote, “To love at all is to be vulnerable. Love anything, and your heart will certainly be wrung and possibly broken. If you want to make sure of keeping it intact, you must give your heart to no one, not even to an animal. Wrap it carefully round with hobbies and little luxuries; avoid all entanglements; lock it up safe in the casket or coffin of your selfishness. But in that casket — safe, dark, motionless, airless — it will change. It will not be broken; it will become unbreakable, impermeable, irredeemable.”

Like everyone else, people in church are also capable of attitudes, behaviour, and words that cut the heart. I’ve been wounded in church. In my pain, I’ve been tempted to do what so many others have done: to get angry, become cynical, and just walk away. I didn’t leave the church or walk away from my faith, but I wanted to. Perhaps you have.

Jesus has scars too, lots of them; they’re reminders of his love for us and that wounds heal. My sin put holes in his hands and feet, a gash in his side, and the marks on his back and brow.

Though I didn’t deserve it, he loved me and healed the wounds of my heart.

The pain is gone. I’m forgiven and free. Are you feeling beaten up by your past? Spend some time with Jesus. He’s the wounded healer.

“He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement for our peace was upon Him, and by His wounds we are healed.”

Mountain Stampede bucks into Panorama Mountain Village

Those looking to lasso their way into family fun this weekend can wrangle up to Panorama Mountain Village for the resort’s second annual Mountain Stampede Festival running from March 8th through 10th.

“The festival adds a celebrative atmosphere and is perfect for families who are visiting Panorama,” said Jamie Hurschler, marketing specialist with Panorama Mountain Village. “The festive atmosphere, on and off slope events and live music ensures that there is something for everyone, no matter the age or interest.”

One of four winter festivals put on by the resort each year, the Mountain Stampede comes kicking out of the gate on Friday with free tobogganing from 4:30 p.m. - 9 p.m. and, for those over 19, a performance by Funk and Disorderly at the T-Bar and Grill beginning at 10:30 p.m. The band, who are based out of Canmore, are known for their wide range of covers, which include songs from Stompin’ Tom Connors all the way to Bob Marley.

The fun begins again on Saturday with the “There’s A Snake in my Boot” hunt. While even Indiana Jones was wary of serpents, brave adventurers are encouraged to track down as many (toy) snakes as they can, hidden on the Magic Carpet, Silver Platter or Mile One Quad runs, for special prizes at the guest services desk.

Mountain mascot Pano Pete is scheduled for a visit during the mountain carnival, which features a host of games for youngsters and is scheduled from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Delegates from the Calgary Stampede will be on hand to keep the boot scoot boogie going with a special line dancing party and lassoing lesson beginning at 12 p.m. Athletes looking to risk bone-shattering bails in the quest for ski hill glory will find their needs met at the Syndicate Rail Jam Series held at the Rockstar Terrain Park from 6 p.m. – 9 p.m.

Sunday kicks off with a pancake breakfast at the Great Hall with delegates from the Calgary Stampede from 8 a.m. – 10 a.m.

“This weekend is going to be a very busy weekend for us,” Mr. Hurschler added. “It is like nothing else.”

For more information on the festival, please visit www.panoramaresort.com.
